This society was founded on February 1, 1883, as a 'Tischgesellschaft d. Oe. Tour.-Klub', taking its name from a valley on the Schneeberg. Till 1895 membership of the Oe. T.-K. was essential for membership of the "D'Voisthaler." The scope of the society is : expeditions in the lower and the higher Alps, improvement and making of paths, building huts, etc. : especially on the Hochschwabgruppe, to which for some years past its activities have been confined. This volume contains a full report of the Society's work and of expeditions made by members.

Barry, Martin. Ascent of Mont Blanc. 1835
Presented by C. Trotter, Esq.

On this copy is written: 'The Author, with much respect and very kind regards, to his friend Elizabeth Fry. Earlham 4th of 10th Month, 1835.'

There is a curious slight variation on the title-page of this copy, as compared with the copy already in the library, viz. 'Sept'r' is here in small letters instead of capitals.

de Beaumont, Elie. Faits pour servir à l'histoire des montagnes de l'Oisans. Reprinted from Annales d. Mines, 3. sér. tome V.

8vo, pp. 63; maps. Paris, Carilian-Goëury, 1834

Belloc, É. Glaciers de Néouvielle; see France, 1905.

Belloc, H. The Pyrenees. London, Methuen [1909]. 7/6 net 8vo, pp. xi, 340; maps, plates.

The illustrations of this volume have the same charm as those of the author's 'Path to Rome.' Neither the subject nor the treatment, however, has the same fascination; but then this is definitely written for instruction. There are chapters on the physical nature, the political character, the road system, the maps, the inns, of the Pyrenees; on travel on foot and on the separate districts of the Pyrenees. The book is eminently readable and full of practical details and suggestions not usually found in a guide book.

Berchtesgadener Land, Führer durch das: und durch Teile des angrenzenden bayerischen und salzburgischen Gebirges. Grosse Ausgabe. Hsg v. d. Sektion Berchtesgaden des D.u.Oe.A.-V. (Neu bearbeitet v. D. Reck . . .). 16. Aufl.

8vo, pp. xiii, 242; maps, plates. Berchtesgaden, Vonderthann, 1909

A complete guide to the district, to all expeditions, easy and difficult. It has been recommended as a type by the Central Committee of the D.u.Oe.A.-V. to all sections considering the publication of local guides.

Imp. 8vo, pp. 45 ; 48 plates. Berlin, Gustav Braunbeck, 1909
The plates form a most interesting series of views of the Jungfrau, etc., taken from the balloon. The route was from the Eiger Glacier to Brieg, to the east of the Mönch, over the Jungfrau Firn and the Gr. Aletsch Glacier, in 1908. There are some very fine plates and they are all interesting, the views being taken from an unusual position.
Some of the cloud scenes are very fine indeed, and as the upper lights are obtained give a very different view of cloud effects from what one sees from the usual lower standpoint.

This article mentions that the peak was first climbed September 8, 1790, by Claude Penthé, and next by Captain Lloyd exactly forty years after. The above is reprinted from Rapport Soc. d'hist. nat. de l'Île Maurice, 1832.

The first ascent is mentioned by Bernardin de St Pierre in 'Harmonies de la Nature.' The following is taken from the translation of 'The Harmonies,' by W. Moeston, published in 1815: 'Vanity often leads to attempts of greater danger than are permitted by necessity. The human mind is apt to tremble over the plumber who repairs our roofs and our spires; but in the Isle of France a mason had once the rashness to go up to the salient cube which crowns the peak of the mountain called Peter Booth. By the assistance of some iron stuck into the clefts of the pyramid, he succeeded in getting to its upper part, where, throwing himself backwards, his body being suspended in the air, he succeeded, by means of the irons in question, in putting his feet on that base on which none but birds had till then rested, and showed himself to the affrighted islanders on a pedestal the top of which is lost in the clouds. His name ought to have been inscribed there, were not the remembrance of rash and useless actions deservedly consigned to oblivion.'

Svo, xii, 257; plates.

A delightful book of exploring adventures and on the animals and trees of the Rockies. The author records several narrow escapes from the giving-way of snow cornices, snow-slides, etc. Mountaineering in the Rockies affords the fascinations and the difficulties of camping in unexplored wilds. The reader here gets a vivid and varied picture of the camper's life.

NEW EXPEDITIONS.

FIRST TRAVERSE OF MOUNT SEALY (8,631 ft.). February 2.—Mr. Claude Macdonald with Peter Graham ascended Mount Sealy by the E. arête (originally ascended by Mr. FitzGerald with M. Zurhigen). Leaving camp at 3.45 A.M. they reached the summit at 9.15. Leaving at 10.15, they followed the W. arête and returned to camp at 1.45 P.M.

FIRST PASSAGE OF GREEN'S SADDLE (10,250 ft.) from the Hooker Glacier to the Tasman Glacier.—This expedition originally started as an ascent of Mount Cook. The above, with the addition of P. Murphy as porter, camped high on the Hooker Glacier on February 19; started next morning at 3.30, and reached the bergschrund at 4.50. Owing to the lateness of the season we had great difficulty in crossing this. By good rocks ascended the N. side of couloir to Green's Saddle (7.30). Following the arête directly from
