- Miyoshi, M. and Makino, T. Pocket-atlas of Alpine plants of Japan. Second revised edition. Tokyo, Seibido, 1907
2 vols, 8vo, 70 col. plates. Text in Japanese, Latin and English.
The Japanese highlands appear to be a place of refuge and development for all sorts of alpine plants. The majority are, as might be expected, of Siberian origin, such as Anemone altaica, Achillea sibirica and Legalaria sibirica. But the Scandinavian type is well represented by Diapensia lapponica, Artemisia norvegica, Linnaea borealis, Papaver nudicaule and many others. The more southern or Mediterranean type is also present and is represented by the Geneva Adenophora, Inula, Isopyrum and others. Many species are identical with those of the Alpine flora, as Lloydia serotina, Loiseleuria procumbens, Viola biflora and Cerastium alpinum: and a very large number are nearly related to them. The only genus of any importance which is widely distributed in the Alps and wanting in Japan is Androsaceae. The Japanese highlands appear to be richer than the Alps in varieties of Ericaceae and the smaller orchids and poorer in saxifragae. The alpine genera of Primulaceae and Gentianaceae are well represented, although the species are not identical. T. H.

NEW EXPEDITIONS.

Bernese Oberland.

KLEIN BALMHORN, (3676 m. = 12,057 ft.)—Ascent by a rib on the S. face.

The following expedition does not appear to correspond with any of those which I have been able to find previously described. On August 8, 1910, with the guides Jean Maître and Heinrich Fux I left Leukerbad at 4.28 A.M. in perfect weather. Following the path past the Clavinen Alp we traversed the mountain side in a N.E. direction across numerous gullies and above the lower tier of cliffs, until we reached a point below the S.W. arête of the Balmhorn, beyond which the whole face of the mountain was of snow with rock ribs descending it (these slopes would doubtless in an ordinary season be free from snow) topped by the cornice of the S.W. arête. We now halted from 8.5 till 8.50 A.M. at a rock island. From here we saw a rock rib the best defined one between the S.E.
